READERS TO VOTE FOR BOOK PRIZE

THIS Thursday, August 11, will see the announcement of the 10 titles and authors long-listed for this year's Citizen Book Prize.

The next stage of the competition, from Thursday through until the end of the month, will see Citizen readers able to have an impact on which of these entries make it onto the short list.

This list will then be presented to a panel of judges including CitiVibe editor Bruce Dennill, Pan Macmillan's Andrea Natrass, author and radio personality Sam Cowen and former Citizen Book Prize finalist Amanda Coetzee (now working on the second title in a three-book deal she earned on the back of being shortlisted for the prize).

Details on how to vote will appear in Thursday's CitiVibe, along with the synopses of all the long-listed titles. Read them all, choose your favourite and then follow the voting instructions and make your mark – your vote will help to ensure that an emerging author will get on the map, and provide content you already know you want to read.
